IF you're a true East Indian (EI), the weekend is no time for slowing down and unwinding. No sir, we throw a party. And once a year, this party puts on the livery of a festival — bells, whistles and ghumats — because you would expect nothing less from a loud and proud community. This Saturday, the Mobai Gaothan Panchayat hosts its 14th annual East Indian Sann 2023, a three-in-one

Lugra and other clothes on sale at the festival festival of food, music and football at the St Andrew's grounds in Bandra.

The main attraction, the food festival and bazaar, will showcase quintessential East Indian fare including potato chops, bottle masala, pickles, letri, chitaps, khudi curry and more. Rita Rodricks, a food blogger at Rita's Tales and food fest chief coordinator enthusiastically reveals a new addition to the festival, the live fugya counter by the only fugya experts — the women of the community. You'll understand the sentiment once you bite into a fugya, a sweet and savoury deep-fried bread, fresh off the fire. Sann 2023 will also introduce for the first time, the recently launched Cray Cray by Adele Drego for healthy, homely and authentic EIdishes. And if you're going to eat like an East Indian,

The food stalls will offer potato chops, fugyas, moilee curry, chitaps, East Indian masalas and pickles; (below) Rita Rodricks in a lugra you should dress like one too. Choose from a range of lugaras, including dresses, kurtas and shirts made from lugra material, at the clothing stalls. To further your deep-dive into the culture, grab a copy of history and recipe books on sale. Don't miss the kurtas or masalas; these catchy songs are sung in East Indian Marathi. These will be performed at the music awards where prizes across 16 categories will be distributed. Veteran singers in the community like Cedric Tixeira and Valentine Machado will perform along with the recently released medley of masalas by a group under The musEic Project.

Being unfamiliar with the EI culture gives you all the more reason to drop by Sann 2023. Before you experiment with the food and try to find your rhythm to the masala songs, make a beeline to the full-day football tournament for an opportunity to bond on common ground. The tournament is played by 20 teams from across Mumbai's gaothans competing for the Gaothan Premier League trophy.

Alphi D'Souza, global head, and Gleason Barretto, global ambassador, share their excitement about the team's work towards a greener festival noting that the stage will be solar-powered. They add, "East Indian Sann was initiated to bring the community together and celebrate through the promotion of culture and tradition."

FREE ON May 6; 5 pm to 10 pm (football tournament from 9 am)
AT St Andrew's Quadrangle, St Dominic Road, Bandra West.

MOBAI CHE HIREY

Stars of the East Indian Community

MR. GLENN PAIS

Can you tell us about the inspiration behind setting up such a massive billboard on the Mumbai-Pune Expressway?

- Large Format sites are an important part of our core business. With our Kamshet hoarding we wanted to offer something exclusive and innovative to our esteemed clients. This site is a prime addition to our portfolio of large hoarding sites across various highways like Mumbai-Pune, Mumbai – Nashik, Mumbai – Goa and Mumbai- Gujarat

What were the main challenges you faced during the planning and execution of the project?

There were several challenges we had to overcome to make our vision a reality. The highways often experience high velocity winds and dust storms. We have all the safety precautions in place for our workforce but such unpredictable natural occurrences at times can cause some delays.

Although there are logistical challenges in setting up highway hoardings, we have the expertise of our experienced in-house teams that are capable of promptly handling these.

Keeping in mind the large size, extra reinforcement was required to strengthen the structure.

To ensure a smooth execution of the project at a quick turnaround time, the construction process was delegated to smaller teams that individually handle the tasks assigned to them.

What factors did you consider when choosing the location for the billboard?

- While setting up any new site, the key factors are the strategic location and the visibility the site offers.

With an unobstructed visibility of more than 2 kilometers, Kamshet was the ideal location for this site.

How has the response been to the billboard since it was installed?

-Most of our clients have appreciated the billboard and the response has been positive towards this innovative venture.

Can you tell us about your daughter's role in the project and how she contributed to its success?

-My daughter was the one who contacted India Book of Records and complied with all their requirements. She has personally handled our social media coverage and digital aspects for this exclusive site.

How does it feel to have your company's billboard listed in the record books?

It was indeed a moment of great joy and pride to receive this honour. Years of dedication and consistent efforts have paid off positively.

Do you have any plans for similar projects in the future?

If such an opportunity presents itself, we would surely like to explore it to the best of our ability.

What advice would you give to other entrepreneurs who are looking to take on ambitious projects like this?

If they have the vision, ability and dedication. It is possible to turn their dreams into reality.

MS. SHANIA PAIS

Can you tell us about your father's achievement that got him into the record books?

In the 20th year of his company, my dad set the record for setting up 'The Longest Hoarding in India' at Kamshet on Mumbai - Pune Expressway. The site measures 350 feet in width x 50 feet in height and can be viewed by travellers from Pune to Mumbai. This achievement was recognized by India Book of Records on 23rd April 2023.

Shania Pais

What inspired you to help your father in this project?

Considering this project was monumental, it required extra efforts and assistance for various aspects. I was more than willing to lend a helping hand to make this vision a reality.

What was your role in helping your father achieve this record-breaking feat?

The coordination with various teams working on this project and contacting India Book of Records and complying with all their requirements are the aspects I have handled.

What advice would you give to other young people who want to help their parents achieve their goals?

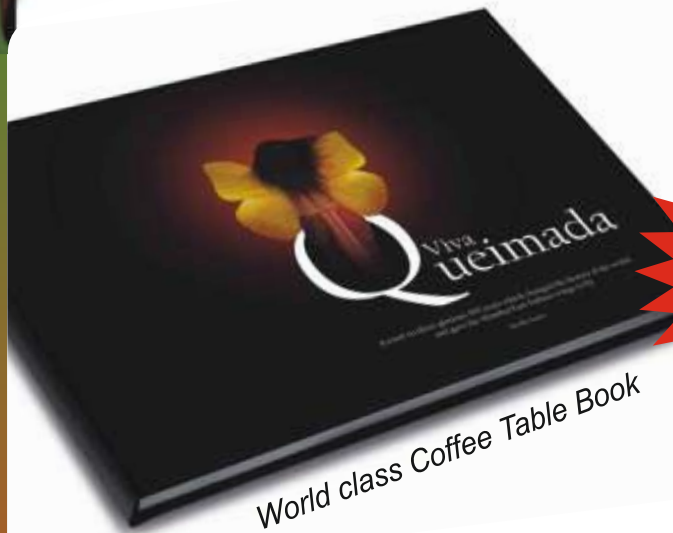

If any youth has an opportunity to make their parents' dreams a reality, they should do so wholeheartedly. When the results are out, the entire family will be proud of what they have achieved.

Family Bonding, Holidays and Gaothan Holy Cross

Gleason Barretto

Bags packed it was time for the Summer Holidays. Children were more than happy to visit their grandparents and be treated like a prince or princess. Their mother was excited to live a life of a queen at her parent's place where she got the much-needed rest. It was a time of great bonding within the family. All the cousins got together during the holidays to spend their time with games, fun and laughter. In the morning all the ladies got down to cooking a special dish for the day. The ladies used the choola for cooking meals for the extended family during holidays. Families prepared a simple meal and went to the fields to spend the day under the shade of trees. The elders planned the schedule for the family holidays with evening get togethers, a family picnic, village festival visits and family games.

On the cards were various activities for children and the youth in the family. To cool off during hot summers we had the kulfiwala and the golawala. In the afternoons the children visited the nearby wadis to pluck mangoes, boras, jaams, jambuls and badaam. The youth went around with katyees to practice their aim. Then we had the village games like viti daandu, lagori, dabba gool, galli cricket or football. We had board games like snakes & ladders, Ludo and not forgetting everyones favourite - Housie. A family picnic was planned to a village which ideally had a beach or a lake for a swim. All elders contributed and sponsored the various picnic requirements. The family also planned a visit to the village festival like the local parish feast which were mostly celebrated during the school holidays in May or the other popular village Festivals like Trindat Cha Sann, Kondita Cha Sann, Phool Dongri cha sann and the San Roque cha sann.

Near every Gaothan home was the family or pakhadi holy cross. The Holy cross in the East Indian Gaothans gave it a true Christian identity. Everyone in the Gaothan visited the Holy cross in the evenings for the Ladin or Litany offered by a family, which was followed by serving channas and a soft drink. The larger family who had their extended family from other Gaothans also offered a special family rosary at the Gaothan Holy Cross or at their home also called the enthronement day. On the last day of May was mostly the Cross feast with special snacks and refreshments served, and at times there was dinner. After reciting the rosary at the Holy Cross elders waited at the village square for some fellowship and the evening ended with a round of Housie.

Dear family to a divided family, surely the times have changed. There was a time when the larger family, maternal or paternal was dear to each family member. The holidays, the Holy Cross feast and the family picnic were ways to BOND within the family which surely helped the family to be close-knit. In today's scenario we have nuclear families with both elders working and joint families are rarely seen. Times are busier today and there is no scope or effort for fellowship. To add to this property disputes have divided the entire family, with siblings fighting the property share battle in court. We have forgotten our relationships for materialistic gains. Family bonding and prayers helped build healthy relationships but lack of these have made family relations bitter. Can we have the family bonding times again? Very difficult but surely not impossible. Each one of us need to do our bit to create the family bonding once again. MGPs first punchline theme was CHANGE Begins with ME and it's time we live up to this theme. We at MGP appeal to you to try your bit to create the family bonding we once treasured. Together let's take our community to greater heights beginning with our family first through bonding at holidays and the Cross feast.
